

Information Sheet for Organisations and Businesses on use of the SSaW resources

Signed Safety at Work – a free online Health-&Safety training resource for use by employers, Health & Safety professionals and general employees.

Demands, Standards and Resources

Through the training resource, Signed Safety at Work (SSaW) is creating a rare opportunity for:

- companies,
- public bodies,
- institutes and
- voluntary organisations

to keep ahead of the demands for high Health-&Safety standards that come from employees, authorities, and increasingly from consumers.

To this end, SSaW – a collaborative trans-European project – has developed a sign vocabulary of 200 essential Health-&Safety instructions and warnings, with the online training resource to support it, all available at www.signedsafety.eu.

Benefits and Beneficiaries

The resource seeks to facilitate workplace communication between all employees regardless of hearing and language ability as an inclusive way to communicate Health-&Safety messages effectively. Our site (www.signedsafety.eu) contains the sign vocabulary and the accompanying glossary to facilitate effective communication in the workplace between:

- hearing native speakers,
- hearing non-native speakers,
- the Deaf community, and
- other hearing-impaired people.

These terms are learnable through the project's e-Learning course, designed for Health-&-Safety officers and all other staff, that will:

- reinforce high standards,
- maximise recruitment and retention opportunities, and
- support an inclusive work environment.

The glossary and e-Learning are in English, German and Italian and will teach workers how to communicate vital safety information to their colleagues in International Sign. In addition the glossary shows all of the safety phrases in International, British, Austrian and Italian sign languages.

The learning is available on desktop, laptop, smartphone or tablet for free

Open Education

As the SSaW Partners want as many interested parties as possible to use these resources, the glossary and e-Learning elements are available under a Creative Commons licence – free of charge and without the need to register.

Users can simply attribute the source using the text provided and then – naturally – avoid selling it as a commercial product; but they should feel free to use it to train workers within a commercial setting.

A user can also apply for the written consent of the SSaW Partners if one wishes to alter, transform or build on the work to enhance particular learning purposes.
